Vermont is not so desperately bad a case after all. The Democrats increased their vote nearly four thousand since last year and elected thirty-seven members to the Legislature, a larger number than they have had for years. It is true a large increase in the vote revealed that the increase of the Democratic vote is greater in proportion to that of the Republican as compared with last year, and a comparison with four years ago shows that the gains are on the Democratic side, and that the Republicans have actually lost. The full eturns show that they have thirty thouand majority, but that, it will full to about twenty-five thousand, and perhaps a little under that figure - Charleston News.
